TRANSITIONAL RULE:

Considering the need to introduce changes in the water supply networks in order to ensure the physical separation of the water network for human consumption from the irrigation network, it is necessary to regulate this process. Users wishing to request (if technically feasible) the installation of a second meter for irrigation, will have a transitional period of two years for the implementation of changes to the water supply network, fixed at 100 cubic meters / Month, for the maximum volume of water consumed, to be considered for the determination of variable waste fees for sanitation and urban waste for domestic users.

Users who want this solution should request, by filling an specific form, this installation accompanied by a water network project where the separation of the networks is identified in order to be approved. All the installation works required for the second meter shall be at the owner's expense.
